Jovanni Myers is a highly decorated army veteran who transitioned successfully into a long and distinguished law enforcement career across multiple agencies in San Andreas. His proven leadership capabilities and passion for public service have driven impact from urban police departments to state-wide patrols.

Early Life

Born in 1990, Jovanni spent his formative years in central Los Santos alongside older sister Samantha. He endured the same parental neglect and poverty that shaped Samantha's childhood as their mother battled addiction cycles and their father served prison time.

With no functional parents in the household, Samantha took on parenting duties for Jovanni. She worked tirelessly to provide basic needs for them both while also trying to keep Jovanni shielded from the chaos and dangers around them.

Jovanni witnessed Samantha's struggles firsthand. Her immense sacrifices and protection in turn gave him the security needed to focus on schooling. He found refuge in athletics, excelling on his high school's football team even with minimal guidance or resources at home.

But the volatile environment still left Jovanni yearning for greater stability and purpose beyond Los Santos. At 18, he decided to enlist with the army, following the path Samantha trailblazed by joining the Marines years earlier.

Military Career

The structure and community Jovanni found in the army gave his life the direction it had lacked. Rigorous training quickly toughened both his physical strength and mental fortitude.

Early commendations for sharpshooting skills led Jovanni to pursue Special Forces Ranger training after initial tours. He thrived in the unrelenting physical challenges and technical intricacies of covert operations.

From 2011 to 2018, Jovanni completed five globe-spanning tours with his tightknit Ranger team. The harrowing firefights, battlefield losses, classified missions and trauma bonded the men for life. Jovanni considered them closer than family.

But the constant violence and stress took a heavy toll over multiple deployments. Jovanni lost nearly a third of his comrades in action. The survivor's guilt and grief weighed on him tremendously despite honors earned, like the Expert Infantryman Badge. Jovanni left the army in 2018 with the rank of Captain, an Army Commendation Medal for exceptional service, and emotional scars that would linger. But his time in uniform gave him an abiding sense of purpose and duty.

Law Enforcement Career

Eager to continue serving, Jovanni joined the San Andreas State Patrol in 2019 after returning home. Highway patrol allowed him to utilize tactical training while assisting motorists statewide.

After two years of distinctive service with the SASP, Jovanni transferred to the LSPD's demanding urban environment in 2021. He worked under then-Chief Shaun Wynkoop, responding to violent crimes from shootings to riots that tested his capabilities.

In 2022, Jovanni moved to the Blaine County Sheriff's Office seeking a greater leadership role. His diligence and tenacity combating the county's unique challenges led to rapid advancement.

As a BCSO Sergeant, Jovanni's mentorship and oversight were integral to the continued professionalization of the department. When the SASP sought a new Commander to lead their organization in 2024, Jovanni was an obvious choice.

He guided the state-wide force expertly for over two years as Commander while earning a Master's Degree in Criminology.

Today Captain Myers continues molding BCSO's next generation while enjoying the county's rugged beauty in his off hours. Despite his elevated rank, Jovanni remains an approachable, community-focused lawman guided by selfless service.

Personal Life

Off-duty, Jovanni can often be found at John's Repairs, the Sandy Shores mechanic shop run by his close friend John Adams. Jovanni provides a steadying presence there while learning the trade. He rebuilt his own vintage pickup from scratch in the shop's garage.

Despite the traumas faced, Captain Myers remains defined by selfless service, honor and community values. He aspires to have the same uplifting impact on younger deputies that his sister Samantha had on him growing up.
